

had a long talk, and that others were reported to be anxious yesterday afternoon to see Holden, and that all of the hold-ons have been informed by jurors that they would be wanted in the case. No further witnesses are to be heard until the jury docket is cleared, which will give such of the jurors as are so inclined ample time to see and be seen.

MR. GREENEBAUM.

A reporter called on Mr. Greenebaum last evening with reference to this matter, and said to him:

"I understand that an effort is being made to have you indicted. Do you know anything about it?"

"I wouldn't be surprised," said he, "at anything that Mr. Millard or Mr. Holden might do in retaliation for my effort to get them removed from office."

"Have they any evidence upon which to base a criminal charge?"

"No, certainly not. Their attempt is as ridiculous as the report of McCheaney, which was gotten up under the inspiration of Mr. Millard, charging me with having paid out money on orders where the vouchers were not properly signed at the office of the Park Board by the Finance Committee,—something which, if true, I would have nothing to do with, my duty being simply to pay money on orders properly issued. I have been informed by parties who have read the McCheaney report that it seemed to have been gotten up with a view of laying a foundation for an indictment. A copy of it has not been sent to me, but I know that a great many copies have been sent in every direction for the purpose, I have no doubt, of injuring me."

"Will you submit to this defamation of character?"

"O pshaw, I wouldn't resort to a criminal prosecution, and I look on both Millard and Holden as perfectly irresponsible. I have troubled myself very little about them since the matter was taken up by the Governor."

"You do not fear an indictment?"

"Of course not. I am able to prove my innocence. My only regret is that I have ever been associated with such men."

THE GRAND JURY.

GREENEBAUM'S CASE.

The Grand Jury yesterday took up the work of investigating the affairs of the West Chicago Park Board. A. C. Millard was the only witness examined, and he testified substantially to what has already been published as the result of the investigation of "experts." There is something mysterious about the conduct of the jury in the matter, as no one seems to know how or by whom the case was opened up. Some days ago it was noted in these columns that the investigation would be commenced, and the announcement was made on what a reporter overheard of a conversation between two or three jurors, and this is all that is known. It is very evident, however, from what could be gleaned on the subject that the hold-on Park Commissioners are at the bottom of the work, and that they have been aided and abetted on the outside by certain jurors who have gained a reputation as "crooks." The investigation is to be conducted especially, as far as could be learned, for the purpose of maligning Mr. Greenebaum,—in other words, with a view to bringing the old Board right into the Criminal Court. This supposition is abundantly sustained by the fact that one of the jurors was with Mr. Lipe last evening and
